In the matter of:

Claimant/Appellant

R.A.A.C. Order No. 13-08358

vs.

Referee Decision No. 13-75704U

Employer/Appellee

ORDER OF REEMPLOYMENT ASSISTANCE APPEALS COMMISSION

This case comes before the Commission for disposition of the employer's appeal pursuant to Section 443.151(4)(c), Florida Statutes, of a referee's decision which held the claimant disqualified from receipt of benefits and noncharged the employer's account.

Pursuant to the appeal filed in this case, the Reemployment Assistance Appeals Commission has conducted a complete review of the evidentiary hearing record and decision of the appeals referee. See §443.151(4)(c), Fla. Stat. By law, the Commission's review is limited to those matters that were presented to the referee and are contained in the official record.

The issue before the Commission is whether the claimant was discharged by the employer for misconduct connected with work as provided in Section 443.101(1), Florida Statutes.

The referee's findings of fact state as follows:

The claimant was hired as a part-time Cashier by the employer on February 23, 2008. At the time of hire, the claimant was provided with a handbook during orientation. The employer revised the handbook on September 19, 2011, to include an arrest and conviction policy providing for termination should an employee's [conviction] be deemed job related. The claimant was aware that associates had access to the policies and procedures while at work via the employer's ["wire."] While out on an approved medical leave, the claimant was convicted of public assistance fraud receiving ten years' probation. The claimant failed to disclose a family member living in her home while receiving "Section 8" federal housing assistance. Two weeks prior to the expiration of her leave, the claimant reported her conviction to the employer. The claimant was discharged on July 5, 2013.

Based on these findings, the referee held the claimant was discharged for misconduct connected with work. Upon review of the record and the arguments on appeal, the Commission concludes the referee's decision is not supported by competent, substantial evidence and, therefore, is not in accord with the law; accordingly, it is reversed.

Effective May 17, 2013, Section 443.036(30), Florida Statutes, states that misconduct connected with work, "irrespective of whether the misconduct occurs at the workplace or during working hours, includes, but is not limited to, the following, which may not be construed in pari materia with each other":

(a) Conduct demonstrating a conscious disregard of an employer's interests and found to be a deliberate violation or disregard of the reasonable standards of behavior which the employer expects of his or her employee. Such conduct may include, but is not limited to, willful damage to an employer's property that results in damage of more than $50; or theft of employer property or property of a customer or invitee of the employer.

(b) Carelessness or negligence to a degree or recurrence that manifests culpability or wrongful intent, or shows an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interests or of the employee's duties and obligations to his or her employer.

(c) Chronic absenteeism or tardiness in deliberate violation of a known policy of the employer or one or more unapproved absences following a written reprimand or warning relating to more than one unapproved absence.

(d) A willful and deliberate violation of a standard or regulation of this state by an employee of an employer licensed or certified by this state, which violation would cause the employer to be sanctioned or have its license or certification suspended by this state.

(e)1. A violation of an employer's rule, unless the claimant can demonstrate that:

a. He or she did not know, and could not reasonably know, of the rule's requirements;

b. The rule is not lawful or not reasonably related to the job environment and performance; or

c. The rule is not fairly or consistently enforced.

2. Such conduct may include, but is not limited to, committing criminal assault or battery on another employee, or on a customer or invitee of the employer; or committing abuse or neglect of a patient, resident, disabled person, elderly person, or child in her or his professional care (emphasis added).

When the claimant was hired, she was oriented to the employer's policies as they then existed and was given a handbook. The employer's policies were subsequently revised to include an arrest and conviction policy providing for termination or suspension should an employee's conviction be deemed to have "a direct relationship to the associate's job or position." At the time the employer altered its policy, the employer did not notify the claimant of the alteration, which its witness testified would have been done had the policy been considered to directly impact her duties.

The claimant has acquiesced in a ruling that her actions constituted public welfare fraud. However, even if allowing her minor nephew to move in with her without registering his presence in her household constituted a violation of the employer's policies, she did not know, and could not reasonably have known, that the employer had a policy that might possibly be impacted by her actions. The fact that she might have been able to find it had she known to look for it is not sufficient to establish that she could reasonably have been aware of it. The Commission holds that on these facts, the claimant has established the first defense to a violation of subparagraph (e) as a matter of law.

Passively allowing employees to examine an employer's policies at will does not place those employees on notice of changes that occur over time. When a policy evolves, the employer has the initial burden to notify affected workers. If it does not, it assumes the risk that a worker will violate a policy they have no knowledge of, and if discharged will have a defense to a claim of misconduct under subparagraph (e).

The decision of the appeals referee is reversed. If otherwise eligible, the claimant is entitled to benefits. The employer's record shall be charged with its proportionate share of benefits paid in connection with this claim.

It is so ordered.

DECISION OF APPEALS REFEREE

Important appeal rights are explained at the end of this decision.

Derechos de apelación importantes son explicados al final de esta decisión.

Yo eksplike kèk dwa dapèl enpòtan lan fen desizyon sa a.

Issues Involved:

SEPARATION: Whether the claimant was discharged for misconduct connected with work or voluntarily left work without good cause as defined in the statute, pursuant to Sections 443.101(1), (9), (10), (11); 443.036(30), Florida Statutes; Rule 73B-11.020, Florida Administrative Code.

CHARGES TO EMPLOYMENT RECORD: Whether benefit payments made to the claimant shall be charged to the employment record of the employer, pursuant to Sections 443.101(9); 443.131(3)(a), Florida Statutes; Rules 73B-10.026, 11.018, Florida Administrative Code. (If employer charges are not at issue on the current claim, the hearing may determine charges on a subsequent claim.)

Findings of Fact: The claimant was hired as a part-time Cashier by the employer on February 23, 2008. At the time of hire, the claimant was provided with a handbook during orientation. The employer revised the handbook on September 19, 2011, to include an arrest and conviction policy providing for termination should an employee's conviction be deemed job related. The claimant was aware that associates had access to the policies and procedures while at work via the employer's "wire". While out on an approved medical leave, the claimant was convicted of public assistance fraud receiving ten years probation. The claimant failed to disclose a family member living in her home while receiving "Section 8" federal housing assistance. Two weeks prior to the expiration of her leave, the claimant reported her conviction to the employer. The claimant was discharged on July 5, 2013.

Conclusions of Law: As of June 27, 2011, the Reemployment Assistance Law of Florida defines misconduct connected with work as, but is not limited to, the following, which may not be construed in pari materia with each other:

- (a) Conduct demonstrating conscious disregard of an employer's interests and found to be a deliberate violation or disregard of the reasonable standards of behavior which the employer expects of his or her employee.
- (b) Carelessness or negligence to a degree or recurrence that manifests culpability, or wrongful intent, or shows an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interest or of the employee's duties and obligations to his or her employer.
- (c) Chronic absenteeism or tardiness in deliberate violation of a known policy of the employer or one or more unapproved absences following a written reprimand or warning relating to more than one unapproved absence.
- (d) A willful and deliberate violation of a standard or regulation of this state by an employee of an employer licensed or certified by this state, which violation would cause the employer to be sanctioned or have its license or certification suspended by this state.
- (e) A violation of an employer's rule, unless the claimant can demonstrate that:
 - 1. He or she did not know, and could not reasonably know, of the rules requirements;
 - 2. The rule is not lawful or not reasonably related to the job environment and performance;
or
 - 3. The rule is not fairly or consistently enforced.

The record reflects the claimant was discharged according to the employer's policy. Although the evidence presented indicates that the policy in question was not in place at the time of hire, it was shown the claimant had access to the employer's online system while at work throughout her employment. While the claimant alleged that she was not aware that her conviction could lead to discharge, undoubtedly, any employer would have a valid interest in an associate's criminal record. Furthermore, where the claimant was in a position of trust handling cash on behalf of the employer, the employer established that a conviction of fraud is directly related to her position as cashier. The claimant's actions demonstrate a deliberate violation of reasonable standards of behavior an employer has a right to expect from its employees. Accordingly, it is held that the claimant's discharge was for misconduct connected with work. The claimant; therefore, is subject to disqualification. The employer shall remain non-charged.

Decision: The determination dated August 5, 2013, is AFFIRMED.

If this decision disqualifies and/or holds the claimant ineligible for benefits already received, the claimant will be required to repay those benefits. The specific amount of any overpayment will be calculated by the department and set forth in a separate overpayment determination, unless specified in this decision. However, the time to request review of this decision is as shown above and is not stopped, delayed or extended by any other determination, decision or order.

This is to certify that a copy of the above decision was mailed to the last known address of each interested party on September 13, 2013.
